Daemen College
Faculty and Staff

Dear Colleagues,

I hope that you are doing well and enjoying our first week of spring. I am pleased to announce the appointment of a new director of institutional communication, Daniel Robison, effective April 12.

Daniel comes to Daemen with a great deal of experience at institutions of higher education, both in his current role as assistant director of media relations at Case Western Reserve University and previously at Oregon State University.

He is no stranger to Western New York, as his experience includes a position as reporter and producer with local NPR station WBFO.

Daniel earned a B.A. in history from the University of Evansville, an M.A. from Indiana University and he is working on an MBA from Case Western Reserve University.

Relocating to the area from Cleveland, Daniel and his wife, Rachael, a southtowns native, are excited to come back to Western New York, and we are equally excited to have them join our college community.

Please help me welcome him to Daemen: robison.daniel@gmail.com

Cordially,
